Details: Thank you for being in touch about the courses that we are developing for the Masters of Health and Human Performance Degree (MSHHP) at Pacific College. Pacific College is a well-known institution for masters and doctor level training for acupuncturists. They are now starting a new department within the college in which this MSHHP degree is being formed. The idea for this program was developed to advance and further legitimize of the field of health coaching, offering a graduate level of training to qualified adult learners who want more than what a short program/certificate can offer. The education will provide a foundation in performance physiology and psychology, nutrition, and even Chinese medicine. From that foundation it teaches students to identify the causes for performance gaps, create resources to improve and sustain performance, and finally evaluate the results against goals, expectations, or requirements. While coaching may be final application for many students, others may become health educators, product developers, health journalists, or they will use the knowledge and skills acquired to be more effective middle or upper managers in any enterprise.

This master's degree curriculum is being developed by those who are seasoned in curriculum development at the graduate school level, and is currently going thru the accreditation process. We have written out a draft syllabus for the introductory to nutrition course to get thru the accreditation step. Now we need someone with more subject area expertise to help us revise/complete the fleshing out of this introductory nutrition course, as well as to create the advanced nutrition course for the program.

We are also looking for an instructor to teach these live, online classes, especially for the advanced level. Participation in the creation of the curriculum doesn't require instruction, although the right person is certainly invited to both create curriculum and to teach it.

Would it be possible for you to put any qualified interested alumni in touch with me and I will arrange to connect them with the Dean? I am confident that your MUIH alumni are highly qualified and will be a great fit for this opportunity. I am helping a family friend and I wish to find her an exceptional experienced candidate who can take the ball and run with it!

Many thanks to both you and Liz for your help.
